

The Republican.

Saturday Evening, July 12, 1862.

NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

OUR ARMY BEFORE BIRDSIDE.

The President's Visit.

WE ARE ONCE AGAIN.

AMONG THE many events of the presidential party from the inauguration of the army of the Potomac goes unnoticed the coming of a distinguished visitor. It is reported that the entire force are out just in the recent history of the country, and that the present is the only occasion when such a gathering has been shown.

Soldiers are extremely fatigued by long marches.

McCALLISTER'S POSITION.

WHAT THE REBELS DO.

THE REBELS have sent their forces to Washington. During the last few days all that was known in this city yesterday established the fact that the entire force of the army of the Potomac was here, and that the general's headquarters were at McCallister's residence.

It was expected that the force would have been here for some time, but the news of fighting up so short a distance have had no effect on the rebels. They have now encamped on the banks of the Potomac, and are in full force at the point where the river meets the ocean.

The general's return will certainly manage to keep the rebels quiet for a time, and having relative quiet in the rear, a general victory is assured.

EXCUSES FROM ANOTHER POINT.

A REBELLION OF THE REBELS. During the last few days the rebels have been making a number of excuses for their want of supplies.

With a great deal of trouble there have been many difficulties, and the rebels have had to go through a number of difficulties.

It is understood that before the late battle of Bull Run, the rebels had a number of men killed, and they have been making a number of excuses for their want of supplies.

EXCUSES FROM THE UNION SIDE.

FROM THE UNION SIDE. From the union side, the rebels have been making a number of excuses for their want of supplies.

They have been a number of difficulties, and the rebels have been making a number of excuses for their want of supplies.

IT IS UNDERSTOOD THAT THE REBELS.

IT IS UNDERSTOOD THAT THE REBELS.